Airpack, Inc. announces affiliation with Anne Arundel Community College & Cecil Community College to help students obtain credits for hazmat training

(Glen Burnie, MD – Airpack, Inc.) Effective October, 16, 2006, Airpack, Inc., a dangerous goods training, packaging & consulting company headquartered in suburban Baltimore, MD, has been designated by two local Maryland colleges for CEU credits when students enroll in their hazmat training. Serving clients Domestically & Internationally, Airpack's training division- John Gerrish & Associates, LLC has been training companies for over 15 years.

Airpack, Inc has joined forces with two local colleges in the State of Maryland to provide CEU credits for students that are trained by our instructors. Anne Arundel Community College (AACC) located in Severna Park, MD and Cecil Community College (CCC) located in Elkton, MD have reviewed our hazardous materials training program and designated our training curriculum for Continued Education Units (CEU's). According to Airpack's Sales Manager, Manny Vazquez, "This is a great opportunity for students that are seeking college credits in the logistics industry or supply chain management degree programs to expand their knowledge". "We are pleased to be able to offer our students the option to use these credits toward a degree program at either college." "It is further commitment that Airpack is working very hard at providing its students with more than just a hazmat certification". "We are distinguishing ourselves from other training institutions by providing trainees with this valuable option," added Mr. Vazquez.

Airpack, Inc. is one of a handful of companies nationally that offer a "hat trick" of combined services. They offer dangerous goods packaging, training, and consulting. Airpack's instructors are IATA Certified and considered industry experts. For more information about the new training program go to www.airpack.com

Airpack employs over 20 employees and operates in two Eastern Cities (Glen Burnie, MD & Charlotte, NC).
